GAVE A CARD PARTY. Evening's Entertaiment in Honor of Young Lady.

In Miss Gertrude Sheppard's honor Miss Maud Girty gave two evening card parties, one on Wednesday and one on Thursday. Miss Lena Cox and Ira Pearce secured the prizes the first evening and the second evening they were won by Miss Nina Reams and given last Tuesday from high noon till low 12 at midnight by the members of the Coronado club.

It was a brilliant reception given to quarters as it was the first public gathering there since the change was made from the Sedgwick block.

Such an array of socal brialliancy has seldom been seen in Kansas as was there on this occasion. No accurate account has been kept of the number of guests in attendance but a fair estimate placed it at 800.

The members of the club did themselves proud for their hospitable treatment of their guests and they will long.

There was some inquiry for classes by buyers and sales were made at about Friday's prices, though the feeding was weak because of the prospect of large receipts for Monday. Steers sold from $3.15 to $3.50, stockers and feeders from $2.55 to $3.50, and cows from $1.50 to $3.50.

Receipts of hogs for today were estimated at 18,000 head, making 19,500 for the week. This is about $5,000 head more than for the last week and $5,000 head more than for the corresponding week last year. Heavy hogs were wanted and showed continued firmness, while light weights were a drug. There was no important change in values. Common to choice light sold at $1,7594.30, and the range for heavy grades was $4,3094.70. The popular prices for the former were $4,0094.50 and for the latter $4,4094.50.

"I don't know exactly what the con gressional reputation for temperance is away from Washington," remarked the story telling member, "but I'm afraid it is bad in some sections.

"Why?" very naturally inquired a listener. "For instance," continued the member, "when I was paying a kind of fence repairing visit to one of the remote countles in my district I stopped for dinner at a country tavern kept by an old fellow I had never met. There was a bar attached, and thither my companion and I adjourned shortly after our arrival. We hadn't seen the old man yet, and a boy was behind the counter. We explained our wants to him, and he had just set out a bottle and a couple of the ordinary small sized whisky glasses when the old man came in. My companion knew him and at once intro that district. We shook hands cordinity, and I asked him to join us. "'Not at all,' he responded, with a how. 'You are to drink with me,' and turning toward the counter he noticed the little 'Here, Bill,' he exclaimed, showing

Shakespeare's vocabulary is said to have been the larges, used by any English writer, and he had not 25,000, but 15,000, and of these 500 were used only once. Milton's combulary comprised about 8,000 words. That of the average educated writer is said to include about 2,000 words, while the average business man uses only about 1,000 words. The average English laborer has about 400 words at his command These estimates are of British origin and are not recent. We're inclined to think that the business man and the mechanic inthis country have rather more extensive vocabularies than these estimates suggest
